

Sinclair Broadcasting has decided that their stations must air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. This is exactly what is wrong with media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and should serve the public interest. But they are more interested in what is good for them than what is good for America and democracy. It is stunning that they should use our airwaves as a tool to influence an election, rather than give voice to both sides of the issues.

This situation demonstrates the need to strengthen, rather than weaken, media ownership rules.
Thank you.
